The following is a list of advanced practice nursing procedures that Margaret Colyar is qualified to perform:

- Physical exams: APNs are able to perform physical exams on patients of all ages. This includes checking vital signs, listening to the heart and lungs, and examining the skin and joints.
- Health histories: APNs can take health histories from patients. This includes asking about the patient's medical history, current symptoms, and lifestyle.
- Diagnoses: APNs are able to diagnose a variety of illnesses and conditions. This includes acute illnesses, such as colds and flu, as well as chronic conditions, such as diabetes and heart disease.
- Treatment plans: APNs can develop and implement treatment plans for patients. This includes prescribing medications, providing other therapies, and referring patients to specialists.
- Patient education: APNs can provide patient education on a variety of health topics. This includes teaching patients about their medications, their conditions, and how to make healthy lifestyle choices.

There are many benefits to receiving care from an APN. Some of the benefits include:

- Increased access to care: APNs can provide care in a variety of settings, including hospitals, clinics, and nursing homes. This makes it easier for patients to access the care they need.

- Improved quality of care: APNs have advanced education and training, and they are able to provide high-quality care to patients. They are also able to diagnose and treat a wider range of illnesses and conditions than traditional nurses.
- Reduced costs: APN care is often less expensive than care from a physician. This is because APNs have lower overhead costs than physicians.

Here are some frequently asked questions about APNs:

- What is the difference between an APN and a physician? APNs have advanced education and training, but they are not licensed to practice medicine. This means that they cannot perform surgery or prescribe certain medications. However, APNs are able to provide many of the same services as physicians, and they can often provide care at a lower cost.
- Are APNs qualified to provide care to patients of all ages? Yes, APNs are qualified to provide care to patients of all ages. They have the education and training to diagnose and treat a variety of illnesses and conditions in both children and adults.
- Can APNs prescribe medications? Yes, APNs are able to prescribe medications. They have the authority to prescribe a wide range of medications, including antibiotics, pain medications, and mental health medications.
